A Personal Message From God Jayne Schriver

The common thread that binds us together as human beings regardless of ethnicity, religion, or geographical location is the mere knowledge that we are mortal. As far as we know, humans are the only species on earth that can actually contemplate their eventual end. Most of us have wondered what happens to us when we take that last breath of life. Therefore, that question has caused many books to be written about near death experiences, but they have all been merely ‘near death’ experiences. These reports have given us glimpses to the other side of the veil, but never in modern times in our western culture has someone returned from death to give us a personal message from God Himself...UNTIL NOW!

This is a true story about a loving, protective brother that returned from the dead to warn his sister about the consequences that were awaiting her if she did not accept God's forgiveness for her sins and accept Jesus Christ as her Lord and Savior just as they had been taught as children. There are those that will immediately grasp the magnitude and meaning of this experience and then there will be the doubters who could never fathom such a thing happening to them or anyone they know. Messages from God and dreams of Jesus are more common place in eastern cultures where they are not so influenced by our western bias towards logic. Some theologians suspect that only those far removed from God ever have such experiences.

“He was coming toward me escorted on each side by two figures that were holding his arms as if to give him support. They were not walking, but floating. The two figures assisting him looked somewhat like people without any distinguishable features at all.

They were much smaller than my brother who was six feet tall, so I assumed that they were females. I jumped out of bed and went to greet him. As he moved closer to me, the two figures just melted into the darkness of my bedroom, and Jimmy was left standing there alone in front of me. I knew I wasn’t dreaming. I was completely awake and standing in front of him!

“I was so happy to see him, but I could not stop the gush of tears that were streaming down my face. Somehow, I knew not to touch him even though I wanted to hug him so badly. I just stood there face to face with him and immediately started firing questions at him. I asked, ‘How was your journey?’”

He spent an entire hour with his sister answering many questions such as, ‘Have you seen God, what does he look like, why are you here, who sent you back here?’ These questions and more were answered by the deceased brother. He also shared a very controversial statement that just might set the religious community on its head, but nonetheless, the sister shares this bit of information for anyone that is ready and able to accept it.

“I have no logical explanation for why or how this happened. I only know that God gave me a miracle that has forever changed how I look at life and death, and it has dramatically altered the course my life has taken.”

This painful story shares the grief of losing a loved one, memories of happier times, and the difficulty of coming face to face with some very disturbing confessions made by the dying sibling. The sister, left behind, grapples with all those confessions as she makes her journey back to God sharing with the reader each painful step on her journey.

This book was fantastic! I bought the book, started to read it on the ride home, and could not put it down. I finished the book that day and cried all the way through reading this great book. I to have lost a loved one, My father, and had an experiance kind of simular to this authors experiance. So the book touched my heart deeply. The way she opened up and captured your attention was just exquisite. I just could not put the book down. I have a brother who I love just like she loved her big brother. I so want to pass this book along to him to read. Just so he can know how much I love him and maybe he will get the message to give his life to the lord. Her words captured me, they had me there with her at all times, but most of all I so felt for her lost of someone she so dearly cared about. I would pass this book on, and on, and on! I can't wait for her next book. As soon as a new book from this author comes on the market I want to read it. I can not get this message out of my head and know that it will help alot of people in so many ways. Please read the book and share it with all your friends. I know I willshare this book with my friends. Again great book.

A very touching story well worth taking the time to read. Well written and believable without any hype or misleading information. A great read for those who could use a bit of reassurance or those who just enjoy reading how others have been touched by God.

Free copy provided generously through goodreads First Reads.

I won this book from Goodreads. As a Christian, I'm not sure how to review this book. As a Christian, I believe anything is possible, even an unknown man - Jimmy, the author's brother - returning from the dead for an hour to speak to his sister.

But in a review of the book, Shouldn't I focus elsewhere?

Jayne loved her brother. Of that there is no doubt. The book seemed 80% anecdote of "Jimmy stories."

Example: Jayne and her husband were preparing to take a trip in their motorhome. Jimmy had insisted on their purchasing Roadside Assistance. The motorhome quit. They called for service, etc. etc. (the same thing happened to my dad and in 4 years I've never made anyone listen to the details.)

Jimmy was a sinner. Big time. Over and over. Not little white lies, parking tickets, man-bites-dog sins. He made these bad choices, performed horrible activities - and now God has apparently sent him to do work for Him?

And he's SEEN God???

From this hour, Jayne heard the message to let Jesus back into her heart and this indeed is a good thing.

I suggest that one NOT quickly dismiss this book just as a memorial to a big brother from his loving sister. It was good to rethink and reaffirm my own beliefs. It is simply written and easy to understand and follow "A Personal Message From God" SHOULD be read and discussed.

Nice to read a hopeful and inspiring book for a change

This book was good, about a protective big brother who leads a wild life, and though he doesn't believe in God, he does many good things to help others, especially toward the end of his life, that he hopes makes up for the bad stuff. I started it last night and finished it in one sitting on my kindle.

Her brother tells her some interesting things that go along with what all paranormal investigators have questions and beliefs about, from personal experience. The fact that we can do 'work' to allow us into the Light, even if we weren't real religious people, is a comforting thing to know for those of us who have lost someone close who weren't particularly religious, yet were decent people.

I think every ghosthunter and "psychic" should read this book. It goes along with much of what we already know about the afterlife, and makes perfect sense--that some spirits can be stuck between both worlds, or unable to go to the Light. I recommend it.

Thank you Jayne for providing your testimony for others to read and hopefully to come to Christ. It is tough to put your testimony out there for others to read and comment on. Really exposes yourself. God called you to do that and you followed through.

Your brother sounds like a great guy and I hope you two are reunited again someday.

I enjoyed the book and applaud you telling your and your brother's story.

Nice easy read and inspirational story about a woman who went through many trials in life and was given a chance to restore her spiritual relationship with God when her deceased brother came back from the dead and spoke to her one night. God can and chooses to use many ways to reach out and speak to each one of us through circumstances, other people or directly.

As I read this book, I felt a special connection with Jayne Schriver. I too have had my own experience of Heaven and have published a book to share my experience. I deeply felt her grief at the loss of her brother. I know how moving and powerful it felt to have a vision or visitation from her deceased brother. I know how it feels to have proof and confirmation and a personal message from God that affirms that the promises of Scripture are true. I have shared the state of turmoil that such an experience causes upon one's life and faith. I know it is a long and difficult process to try to interpret and understand what God's message is for you. I also know the joy of knowing the deep fulfillment of the Christian faith and being blessed by God to share his all powerful love.

All of the above describes what I felt as I read the book. I found the book very moving and part of a growing network of books that confirm that the God of Scripture is reaching out to Christians in the twenty-first Century in visions, dreams, and near-death experiences. Our God is not dead. He is reaching out to us today and saying, "I love you".

This is a deeply moving story about the pain of loss and the strength of the connection between sister and brother. The relationship is too strong to be severed by death as the brother continues, after death, to communicate with Jayne...to warn her of the danger of dying without a loving connection with God and his son, Jesus Christ. Jayne like all of us who lose important others seeks to know and understand more. Jayne has chosen to live her life differently since receiving the message delivered by her brother.

Sharon says

I often tell people that people have stories to tell that can capture you more than fiction. This was one of them. Jayne Schriver gave her readers a chance to share in a deeply personal experience. Many will be better off for have had the chance to read this. She relates her experience in very descriptive detail. It is a brave thing to let strangers share in an experience that is life altering to one's self. This book is recommended.

Dear Readers: I really enjoyed this book! It was well written and told the story of an older brother who was very protective over his little sister. But due to their horrible abusive childhoods, he didn't believe in God. And then he died...and came back one night to tell his sister that there are 'consequences' for not believing in God!

Many thanks to Jayne for sharing!

I got this book for free in a Goodreads First Reads giveaway.

This book was okay. It's not the best book, but I read it and somewhat enjoyed it.

The fact that a 3:00 A.M. phone call is supposed to be bad news, this one didn't seem so bad until the guy was actually starting to die. And when he did die, I thought that it was a long way to go just to bury someone. But you know, whatever. If you want to do that, it's your choice. It's not for me to judge.

I thought I may have seen a few grammar and spelling errors, but I wasn't positively sure. I usually hate to see an error in the book, as to me it doesn't seem professional. It's like eating ice cream and pickles, to me it's stupid and I'd prefer not to see it happen around me. No offense to people who eat pickles and ice cream.

I guess that I should close up my review. I hope you enjoy this short review and the book A Personal Message from God by Jayne Schriver!
