I won a copy of this book through the Goodreads First Reads giveaway program in the hopes that I would leave an honest review after I read it.

I'm a big fan of judging books by their covers (and titles) so I don't always pay a lot of attention to the books details when entering giveaways. This is a case where I didn't get what I was expecting, exactly. I thought I was getting a picture book that I wouldn't want to share with my kids. Instead I got a book of postcards that I simultaneously do and do not want to share with my mother-in-law and sister-in-law because I'm pretty sure they would both love them. I really want to keep the book intact and keep the postcards for myself too though. It's a very serious dilemma.

The illustrations are rather cartoonish, but that was to be expected based on the cover and it works quite well. Also, the cat is rather vulgar and kind of a jerk; that is a very large part of the appeal of these postcards.

I honestly feel like I have to give this book 5 out of 5 stars because I want to keep it, but I also really want to send the postcards to friends and family. I'd recommend it to just about anyone that knows the address of a person who loves cats (so probably everyone), although you may find yourself as reluctant to part with the postcards as I am.

Cute and short.

This book was really funny, and easy to identify with if you have a temperamental *cough BITCHY cough* cat. My only complaint is it was REALLY short. Like I read it in less than a minute short. A cool concept but I had to knock it down a few stars because there should have been like 50-100 pages more, honestly.

this is a scientifically accurate book that reveals what cats are thinking when they do those things they do. turns out that their thoughts are mostly mean and full of cussin'.

cats are in a constant state of aggression:

and things that appear to be cute and playful to the human eye are actually more rooted in impulses of conquest and domination.

cats do not just want a little nibble, they want it all.

and while you might misinterpret things like this as "wanting to be near mommy" it's more likely they just want your stuff

i know how that goes basically, all you need to know is that if you live with a cat, it owns you. it always has. it always will. and if you're lucky, it will wait until you're dead before it eats you.

duty calls....

as a bonus - these are also postcards which you can use to share these truths with others around the world.
come to my blog!

Funny, foul-mouthed, adorable, and dead-on observations of feline behavior.
