I Hate You More Than Anyone Vol. 1 Banri Hidaka

Kazuha Aklyoshi is the eldest of six children. She's very responsible and also irresistibly cute, but she is something of a tomboy who has never allowed her romantic side to show through. Then she meets Mizushima, the first guy to treat her like a girl. He's Kazuha's first real crush, but does Mizushima feel the same way about her? And then there's Sugimoto, an older guy who's determined to make himself an important part of her life, only he's the one she hates more than anyone!

One of my top favorite mangas and i'm still so disappointed that it got dropped thanks to TokyoPops irresponsibility. They closed their doors suddenly and without warning and several series were still licensed to them so no one else couple pick up on it and finish it off. Very frustrating and this series is just funny and fun to read! Sometimes a bit confusing with all the characters but I love a good opposites attract storyline.

Great manga! Senko, Sugimoto, Kazuha, and Honjo are the best! XD

Kazuha Akiyoshi has a big crush on Mizushima, a teacher at her baby brother's daycare. He is kind and considerate and Kazuha can't help but like him so much. Then there is Sugimoto, a hairdresser who seems to be obsessed with her. Except due to his cheeky behaviour, she greatly dislikes him! What is a girl to do when a guy won't just leave her alone??

I have read Banri Hidaka's later series, V.B. Rose, one that I did not highly favour. I Hate You More Than Anyone! is slightly better, though it is a series I would not start collecting.

Kazuha, like most shojo protagonists, has a love interest. As you could probably tell, female characters' first love interest in the beginning of a series usually turn out to be some sort of fluke. Kazuha is the type of character where she keeps a strong face in front of others but when it comes to her personal feelings, she breaks apart. The first volume focuses a lot on her and Sugimoto and how their relationship grows over time, which is cute.

There is one part that I wished didn't happen and that was when Sugimoto cut Kazuha's hair. It became really short and it just irked me how she looked like a male character with a girl's face. Except, this part of the story did contribute overall to her relationship with Sugimoto.

I don't mind the art, but what bothers me the most is the hairstyles Hidaka used on her characters at the time. From the way they were drawn, some characters' hair seemed very thin and it is one of my manga pet peeves. What is even worse is the Sugimoto ties back his hair, making it look like he barely has any hair at all! Other than that, I do love how clean Hidaka's art is.

I Hate You More Than Anyone! is somewhat a slow paced manga, which makes you want to put it down very fast. However if you want some sort of simple romance, you might like this series.

Too bad CMX went out of business before they could finish the series.

Haha, read this in February and totally forgot to add this...whoops.

Cute, but nothing particularly special. Not by VBRose standards, anyway. I still enjoyed it.

This is an amazing manga. I learned that you can fall in love with anyone even if it is the person you hate the most. You just might end up regretting how you treated them. Plus the person you thought you were in love with. You possibly didn't really love them it might have just been admiration.

I won this and a few other manga in a contest a year or two ago and completely forgot about them (and I'm still not really sure why I didn't read them back then). I found two of the manga underneath a thick literature textbook. -__-

Anyway, this series was better than I expected. I thought that it would be your typical shojo manga with an idiot, oblivious lead, but Kazuha isn't stupid. She's just a little naive since she's never really fallen in love before, and she's completely sincere and cares about her family, which makes her very likable, even when she's being stubborn.

Her friends and family are also interesting and adds to the comedic relief in the story, and the love interest is weird but funny, especially when he becomes all clingy, lol. The cast of characters really do make up the plot of this manga series.

The art took a while to get used to; you can definitely tell that the series is not recent from just the clothes alone. But once you look past the art style, the story sucks you in and you kind of don't pay attention to it, only noticing the characters' reactions and emotions conveyed through the images instead.

Although the first volume was entertaining enough, I don't think I'll continue the series unless I can borrow it from someone or find it somewhere else. We'll see.

first couple of books are funny, read up to book 6, but it's too much of a stupid romance for me.

Very uneven, though I love the emphasis on family and friendship. I just wish the male lead was slightly less skeevy. But then, I'm not so big on big-age-gap relationships.

Also, the 90s fashions make me laugh. The little Prada backpack, hee!

It feels like VB Rose to me, plus it's a fun read so far.
