This is one of my all-time favorite books. I got it at the school library when I was in 3rd or 4th grade maybe and I absolutely loved the adventures of Nick, Laura and Katie. I loved the feels it would give my young brain and the adrenaline I felt down my little veins. I loved that this story took place on a boat and that they got to decorate it and make it their own. It just made it feel so personal, exactly something I would do and never has a day gone by when I don't want a little hiding place just like that with hearty food and I love that Nick is not a jerk. He helps just as much, no sexism that I noticed in this book, but I read it a loooooong while ago so maybe I'm missing something. The story was also amazing and the dragon too ;) I loved their methods of sending secret messages and I loved that they were such well behaved kids.

One of Enid Blyton's better books for slightly older readers (or in this case listeners - my 6yo daughter and 4yo son). A mildly exciting adventure in the style of the 'Famous Five' books - no magic or fairies, but plucky children thwarting bad guys!

This is my favourite Enid Blyton book! It is packed with excitement and has the most glorious descriptions of Red Indian games, lapping waters against boats, tunnelling, tree climbing and picnics. A perfectly marvellous read every time.

I especially liked the part when the three kids made friends with the boy next door because it is very nice the boy next door doesn't have any friends.

My favourite character was the boy next door because it looked like he was very fun to play with when the kids came over to his house.

I recommend this kids younger than 11 or over, because even though it looks like it is for little children it is still a very good book.
