The Complete Gardener: A Practical, Imaginative Guide to Every Aspect of Gardening by Monty Don (DK Publishing 2003)(635.0) is a great big book that covers a lot of stuff. It's crammed with gardening photos, but I just couldn't take it seriously. Why? Because it's full of photos of Monty Don - posing in the garden with his dog, sitting outdoors at a picnic table reading the newspaper, etc. The photographer and editor must figure that he's a hunk, but I can't see it. My rating: 3.5/10 for silliness, finished 4/6/11.

The best gardening book ever. I discovered Monty Don's work through this book, found randomly in a USA bookstore, long before I ever saw him on TV--or even knew he had a TV show. (BBC America fail... a bit like my failure to create my English country garden in this north America climate, summers over 40 degrees, and clay hardpan soil.)

I recommend this book to all who love gardening, and to all who love beautiful gardens, good food, and excellent photography.

The is Monty Don's most complete and inspiring book; I espcially like the pleached limes above the box hedge and also liked learning from him what coppicing is and how handy it can be.

Very good book, I enjoyed it a lot. The first, more autobiographical part is great to read, the second part where many varieties of veggies, herbs and fruits are described in detail is useful as a reference. The only thing I didn't like is that the author is very focused on British climate (I think the garden is in Herfordshire) and doesn't offer alternative growing methods for colder climates. Anyway, it's a useful book with great pictures and I learned a lot from it.
