Becoming a Titus 2 Woman

Martha Peace

Becoming a Titus 2 Woman Martha Peace

The definition is clear. A Titus 2 woman is an older, mature Christian woman who teaches and encourages younger women. Her ministry is based on Titus 2:3-5, and she is called by God to make time for this work. She is not called to preach, but to teach, and most of what she has to teach is by example. Much is said and written today about "mentoring." A mentor is a guide, a teacher, a counselor and advisor; all words that apply to the Titus 2 Woman. Within these pages are many examples of how to disciple younger women. It is practical in its approach as it teaches how, by God's grace, we develop the character that God wants every older woman to have. Study questions at the end of each chapter make this volume ideal for group Bible study.

Helen Purdon says

Straightforward Biblical instruction with practical application. Easy read with convicting message that points to the true heart of the matter. We are made to honor, glorify, and serve our God and we are to encourage others to do the same.

Elaine Mazzo says

This book gives very good instruction and encouragement on becoming a Titus 2 woman. It can be dry at times but it is very scriptural. This is something that even a young woman could read so she can see the areas to excel in.

Rachael Marsceau says

Cannot STAND this woman! Had to read it for pre-marital counseling but couldn't get past her pride and feminism which she tries to call "applying Scripture" or submission. Not planning on reading anything else by her.

Megan Wheat says

I feel like Martha was only focusing on the older woman guiding younger women side of Titus 2. As a young woman I see the spiritual need for the type of woman Martha is speaking to/about & I feel this book will be good to go over in a few years when I'm older.

Kristen says

The book overall could have 4 stars but being a young woman I felt like I wasn't quite in a position to be a Titus 2 woman just yet. So for me it was a 3 star book. I thought the book was well written and explained the job of the older woman. I was able to see how I can help the youth in a Titus 2 way but again I still feel lacking to be the older woman model. At times she sounds rather sharp in her explanations. If you come from a more feminist background this may sting a little. The book shared very Biblical ideas and I love how she would have you get into the scripture to find answers. I wish more older ladies would read this book because what she describes is what I want in my life. Maybe I'll reread this book when I am a grandma and give it 4 stars at that time. :)

Sandy Pryor says

I started this a couple of years ago but never finished, feeling it wasn't the best time for me to assume the posture of the woman described in the title. This time, I did finish--similar feelings of inadequacy notwithstanding--and found myself encouraged and challenged throughout the reading. Martha Peace, author of The Excellent Wife (in my to-read pile right now) makes it very clear what the older Christian woman's responsibilities are and are not in helping the younger women. With very practical, doable examples of how to speak truthfully and lovingly, the one-anothering of this type of relationship was really fleshed out in a way that caused me to be able to see myself fulfilling (by God's grace!) this important calling and duty in the Body of Christ. It needs a second reading almost immediately, especially if you are like me and do not take time to fill in the study questions at the end of each chapter. I would even give this book to a younger, in-process Titus 2 woman (aren't we all, ladies?) and tell her, "Aspire to this!", as well as to the youngest of wives so she can know what is supposed to be going on, while we older ones try and fall and try again to help them. Inspires generational thinking and selfless living, and all from a woman who came to Christ in her 30s--which in itself is a huge kick in the seat to quit feeling sorry for myself and my "lack of maturity" and get busy trusting the Lord and resting in His sanctifying work, and to just be available to be used as He wills.

Elisha Baker says

This book was just okay. I read her book "The Excellent Wife" years ago (before I was married) so much of this was a review. The parts about the importance of mentoring younger women, and our often selfish reasons for not mentoring, were good. I didn't agree 100% with her take on things but overall it was good.

Very good and encouraging book/

Arianto Lawardi says

Must read for many women

It teaches you how to be graceful and kind women to be.
Life is tough but with God's words it is easy and have straight answers of what we should do.

Evelyn says

Responsibilities of older Christian Women to teach younger Christian women:

- to love husbands/children
- be sensible/purs
- be homemaker/king
- be subject to own husband and mature in: doctrine, character, and ministry

Muthani says

A great book on women mentoring women in the church setting

Monnie says

Great resource on what a Titus 2 woman is and how to cultivate those qualities in yourself and others.

Donna says

This book would make a good guide in studying Titus 2: 3-5. I wouldn't go through the entire book, but most of it was very biblical and informative.

Eva says

a very good study for any woman. It is addressed to the older woman trying to mentor the younger. But even the younger woman can learn the truths in this book by using it as a guide while they study.

Ann says

Rather north-American centric illustrations and applications but still has good food for thought and helpful exposition of the passage.
