Blaine is not convinced he is of the special Chosen. The New Council may think so, but until he had rock solid proof, he was going about business as usual. As an Enforcer in the New Council Pack, he could stay hidden. No one but a select few knew about his gift. His Beta and now the Council, but just cause he had a few dreams that came true did not mean he was the Seer.

Then one of his mates shows up and all hell breaks loose. Blaine had a very ordered life, everything was about to change and he didn't know if he was going to able to deal. Until his second mate is discovered in a vision, and she is danger. Blaine and Dalton, his other mate, will do what it takes to help her. Even if it means dragging a few unwanted people with them.

D Thomas says

Wolf, Bear and a Sidhe = Seer, Seer and the Anchor.
Humans, shapeshifters and the Fae.
Where are the Witches? Who are they?

I love the way so many different beings are coming together. All working for the same cause. And just like all living beings, there has to be someone or a group of someone's that do their best to throw a wrench in the works.

Are the New Council and all the other Pack members strong enough and smart enough to get it done?

Tia says

I have to be honest, I was kind of bored with this one. Nothing really happened that was worth mentioning but it just felt on going. I felt really let down from this one.
