Sierra the Nerdgirl says

Goldie and Sugar working together should be interesting. I preferred the old artistic style, but this new one will do.

Does anyone know why Brittney Williams didn't illustrate this issue?

This comic is so cute!!

We get to see the end of a date between Goldie and Diane (have I ever told you how much I love that the titular protagonist is a queer woman of colour??) which is just adorable, but then Goldie gets run over!! Her bike is totalled.

But I guess Sugar to the rescue, and now Goldie has a new mystery to solve: who is trying to sabotage Sugar?

Even though I don't like the art as much as Brittney's, Noah Hayes' is still pretty neat in a less cute way, and the writing is still lovely, so I'm definitely not gonna drop this comic any time soon.

Taylor says

Unfortunately my library doesn't have the last bind up, so I'm being forced to read the last three single issue. I really enjoyed this, I hope that Goldie is dating that girl whose name currently escapes me, I couldn't quite tell. I also enjoyed the team up of Goldie and Sugar I think that they make a really interesting pair.

Hayley says

New arc - looking forward to seeing what's going to happen. Needs more Goldie/Diane though.

Connor says

Oh, I like where this arc is going!

(not that I haven't liked the others, but I like this one best.)

Joe Pontillo says

Don't love the new artist. But a promising start to the next mystery
