I didn't even finish reading this book. Not really sure why. Mayb ill come back to it. It had some information in it, but I guess at the moment I'm just not interested. I feel like if we can work on ourselves to make ourselves happy and healthy individuals a lot of the things that are in the book won't be an issue for you. So that's my focus focusing on becoming a loving,happy healthy individual. No offense to Ron, I did enjoy listening to his lecture on YouTube though. (Had to give him a plug, since I ever so gracefully dismissed his book- lol.)

This book was presented to me by co-workers of mine as we started our first book club. Its amazing!! I learned a lot about myself and about my man by reading this book. There were great points given by Dr. Ronn that I saw very true by comparing some of the current issues me and my man had gone through in our communication to one another which has helped me relax mentality on the things I didn't a understand about him or myself. It just helped me see someone things that I do need to work on as a girlfriend and a future wife in my relationship. And encouraged me to be okay with some things that I may never understand about my man that keeps our relationship interesting and compassionate at all times. The suggestions the Dr stated were Christian principle based in a gracious and non- judgmental way towards the both of us men and women. Ladies, it's must read! But you have to have patience with yourself and the one you love to get good results in improving yourself and your relationship with your lovely black man. ;)
