A Touch of Magic Linda Chapman , Ann Kronheimer (Illustrator)

Most of the time, Twilight looks like an ordinary grey pony but when Lauren says the words of a spell he transforms into a magical unicorn and together they can fly all over the world . . .

When Lauren's brother Max makes friends with two new boys, he forgets about looking after Buddy, his puppy. Lauren tries to hide it from their parents, knowing that if they found out Max would get into a lot of trouble and they might even send Buddy away! Can a touch of magic help to show Max how important Buddy really is?

They look into the rose quartz and try to find people to help. It is a sweet story. A bit sad because Twilight is unable to use much of its magic power.

This is the final book I originally owned - the next one will be completely new to me!

In this book we see Max beginning to neglect Buddy, and this makes me sad because I hate it when animals are abandoned. Although not extreme in this book, it accurately portrays what can happen to animals if they're not looked after properly and the sorts of struggles it can cause.

On top of this, the book shows Lauren and her friends sorting out their own issues in regard to their school project - this shows that they have matured and especially Lauren appears to have grown a lot considering what she thinks and comes up with.

This was another stunning book in the series and I loved it when I was younger. I still love it now, perhaps even more than I once did because of the fact that I can now relate to it more; I struggle a lot more to do well in school, I have my own golden retriever to look after and I'm also working with my friends all the time to have fun, so this book is actually really awesome even though it's designed for a younger audience than myself.

Roll on "Snowy Dreams" :D
