The Edge of Violence William W. Johnstone , J.A. Johnstone
THE GREATEST WESTERN WRITERS OF THE 21ST CENTURY

Bestselling authors William and J.A. Johnstone continue the wild, epic saga of Tim Colter with the building of the transcontinental railroad—and the making of the American Dream . . .

Twenty-two years have passed since Tim Colter and his family were ambushed on the Oregon Trail, forcing the young boy to find an unlikely ally in one-eyed mountain man Jed Reno. Now a widowed deputy U.S. marshal and Civil War veteran, Colter is finally ready to remarry and settle down—until a dangerous new assignment becomes a life-or-death struggle for the soul of a town and the heart of its people . . .

The Union Pacific Railroad is laying down tracks connecting the great northwest to the rest of the country. But two rival factions have set their sights on the town of Violet—aka Violence—to gain control of the rails. It's Colter's job to tame the rampant greed and rising tensions. But to do it, he'll need to deputize his trusted old friend Jed Reno—and wage a savage new war that will determine the fate of the Dakota Territory and the future of a nation.

Good Reading!

This is a great story written by a good author who ensured proper editing and grammar. Good wins over evil again!

I didn't know if I would stay with this one for about the first third of the book. There was a lot of historical information and explanation. However, after we got into the story it moved right along and I really enjoyed it. Tim Colter is now 22 years and has a badge as a U.S. Deputy Marshal, Idaho Territory. Bad men are running the little town of Violet and some of the townspeople have asked for his help in taming the town. We also get a glimpse of the building of the Union Pacific Railroad and a swarm of locusts passing thru. Very entertaining.
