I always love a good classic rewritten. When I saw the description for this book, it intrigued me. A son of Captain Hook who can only be stopped by an 80 year old Peter Pan. Sounded like my kind of book.

So I sent it to my Kindle and couldn't wait to read it.

When I finally pulled it up and read it, I was disappointed. It was a 52 page book, but the author had upped the font size from the normal font size, so it wasn't as long of a story as what I had expected. Now, the length by itself wouldn't have been an issue, except that I found no depth. I felt like I was on the back of a frog hopping here and there and trying to hang on for dear life. At the end I had a feeling of, "great summary, now where's the full book?"

Short and the paragraph structure is weird and bothersome. Don't bother.
