The Mystery of the Hidden Painting Gertrude Chandler Warner , Charles Tang (Illustrator)

One warm night four children stood in front of a bakery. No one knew them. No one knew where they had come from.

Henry, Jessie, Violet, and Benny used to live alone in a boxcar. Now they have a home with their grandfather, and they find a mysterious painting hidden in the attic.

The children learn that it is a portrait of their grandmother, whom they never knew, wearing the necklace Grandfather gave her when they were married. The necklace disappeared on their first anniversary--and was never found. Can the Boxcar Children track down a necklace missing for so many years?

Ash(: says

I've read a lot of these books when I was younger and I just wanted to say, I don't know why. They were really boring and it took me forever to read them because I could never really get into them.

Lisa Blair says

The boxcar kids find an old painting of their grandmother which leads to the mysteriously missing necklace she owned.

*Docked for curator's lack of morals i.e. lying, stalking, theft, etc. Not recommended for children ages 5-8; okay for children ages 8-12, if it's discussed afterwards.

WSL Library says

X2

Maggiemyre says

Good for low/struggling students-large print and each chapter ended on a clue or some suspense, thus keeping students very engaged
