It was an enjoyable read that at times made my heart pound and put a smile on my face. I'm looking forward to read the rest of the books in the series.

Tell me this much first. Are you about to make me happy? Or is this going to screw up my world?

- Erica

I finally figured it out. That all I need is you. If I have you, I have everything. Without you, there's nothing.

- Christian

4 stars for the genre. A bit too much made up angst.

I loved Erica and Christian's story. Erica just found out that her dad is not her biological dad and that her bio dad left her 1/6th of his estate along with her other siblings who in-turn knew nothing about her. Christian is the lawyer for Jarred's Ridge and was sent to tell all this to Erica but in meeting her he felt this instant connection. But there's a problem there is a no fraternizing clause in his contract to protect the Jarred's from having employee's seek them out for a raise or something. Is Christian willing to mess up the life he finally built for him self in order for a chance at something more?

Donna says

This was too predictable to really hold my interest. Erica was a strong heroine, but the plot was not very original.

Widala says

The beginning was nice, good story and characters. But then Chris and Erica admitted their attraction towards each other and everything went down hill from there.

Chris became this person who couldn't make up his mind, blowing hot and cold and became all around jerk. Erica turned into selfish bitch who wouldn't understand Chris' dilemma. She even said that her situation was the same as Chris.

Girl, did you work your ass off as a teenager? Yes, you constantly felt the need to prove yourself to your father (boo hoo), but if you chose not to work a day of your life I bet your millionaire father won't let you starve. Where Chris had to provide for his family.

Well, Chris was no better himself. He should have talk to Jarrods children about his problem instead of being, yes, all around jerk.

This is the first book in a series about the Jarrod Family. They are written by different authors but united under Silhouette's Desire imprint.

This book introduces Erica Prentice who was Don Jarrod's child by a woman he loved while separated from his wife. Erica did not know about this until after he died. Don's will left her a portion of the estate but she had to move to Aspen. The lawyer who delivered the news to her, Christian Hanford, fell in love with her almost immediately. The problem was that he had a clause in his contract that he could not be with a Jarrod or he would be fired.

When he tries to resign, the Jarrod in charge wants him to stay with a new contract without the clause so he can be with the girl he loves.

D2024 Jul10, Dynasties: The Jarrods Erica Prentice discovers she is the daughter of Donald Jarrod. He met her mother, Danielle, and they had an affair during a separation from her husband, Walter. Donald Jarrod has died and his will demands his 4 sons and 2 daughters return to Aspen and run the resort the family has owned for generations. If any refuse they will all lose their family business. Lawyer, Christian Hanford, goes to San Francisco to present the facts of the will and the news she has 4 brothers and a sister. Realistic view of the interaction between the siblings and Walter, the man she had called father.

Maura says

I started in the middle of this series and only now decided to read the first in the series...to see where it started out. It starts with the death of Don Jarrod and Christian, the family lawyer, has to inform the family of an illegitimate sister who has also inherited. Then he has to tell her - Erica Prentice. He's instantly attracted, but he knows she's off limits, because, as the family lawyer, a position to which he strived his entire life, he's bound by a non-fraternization clause. Falling in love with Erica would seriously jeopardize everything he's worked for in life. Erica struggles to figure out where she belongs now that she's discovered she's part of another family and begins a new life at the Jarrod Resort. Christian is the one steady thing and she realizes that she wants him, no matter what the cost.

So this was kind of frustrating primarily because of that last line there - Erica wants Christian no matter what the cost - particularly the cost to Christian. Yes, they have some great chemistry and tension, but Christian makes it very clear from early on, that he started with nothing, he worked his ass off to get where he was and that this career of his keeps his mother out of poverty, where they'd spent their whole life, and he owed it all to Don Jarrod, who made it clear that he'd lose it all if he got involved with his daughters. And thus, although Christian is interested, he can't or won't give up everything for Erica. Well instead of trying to see his POV or even wondering if there isn't something they can do so they can be together, Erica continually insists that she wants him to want her more than he wants his career. She doesn't care what he'd have to give up to be with her, the selfish bitch just moans and complains that Christian doesn't want her enough. I could forgive her being hurt for it if she was just a little more sympathetic to Christian's problem. It's not like she's going to sacrifice anything to be with him, but he's supposed to give up all for her. And so he does. And when he tells her that he quit his job for her, exactly what she wanted him to do, she insists that she won't let him give up all he'd worked for for her. WTF? Make up your frickin' mind. It's a bit late to get all sympathetic now? So maybe that's not what she wanted, but that makes it clear to me that she wasn't very articulate about what she DID want him to do. Just Grrr, Erica, Grrrr.

That was really fast ..

I don't know I didn't feel how they progressed to love at that pace ?!

However in regards to other emotion with other people it was good and believable

Joan Mondragon says

It was a real quick read - only 174 pages.
