I've been looking forward to the Dark Jem story line since it was revealed. I mean Goth Jem is just the most perfect idea. When I went to the store to buy this yesterday I ended up buying the box set of ALL the covers! Normally I scoff at the idea of variant covers. They seem designed purely to get money for collectors on the hopes of resale value. But I just LOVED all the girls so much I had to get them all in their outfits. Inside was no disappointment either. It was so wonderful to have Sophie illustrating again. As she had drawn the first issues, that's how I saw the women looking, and it was good to see them back to their original forms. Especially Stormer, I don't think she could possibly look any cuter!

The story was wonderful too! It reminded me how much I love Kelly's writing. She just makes the characters so natural and believable. Teenage would be rock stars living with a hologram, but still totally people you can relate to. The Misfits were auditioning a new singer, and the holograms decided it was time for another party. The only problem with these comics is that 25 pages seems far too short! I'm really looking forward to the next issue!

The most surprising thing for me with this series is how much I like the Misfits. I was never a fan of them in the show (whether that was my age or my general character and musical preferences or my inclinations towards goody-two-shoes-ishness, I cannot say), but I generally like them as people here, which is new for me.

Also, I love the character design and the continued evolution of the characters' styles. It's so wonderful to see the multi-dimensional diversity in the book without any fanfare, that it's just a part of the world... because it's a part of the world. Plus, I appreciate that bare midriffs are seen on more than just traditional runway model types; any body is a bikini body, if that body wants to wear a bikini.

As for the new arc, this is very much the first chapter; I look forward to seeing where it goes.

Solace Winter says

I love the story, it's amazing and what I would expect from Jem. The art direction, however, has me baffled. Okay, so they changed artists, fine. But in this issue especially it seems to be terribly inconsistent and it was distracting, hence why there is 1 star off this time.

Luisina says

Things are looking up! This was actually a good one!

Rochelle says

This was such an interesting issue. The Holograms got to have a pool party while the Misfits held auditions. I was so excited to see the dark sides of our heroes. Sophie Campbell and Kelly Thompson really know how to shake it up and reimagine this amazing series. This was just the beginning of Dark Synergy going haywire. I'm sure the Holograms will become more hardcore than the Misfits. I can't wait till Pizzazz finds out about her replacement. She was strangely calm the whole time. But it's probably from her still recovering from her accident.

Monica says

I really dig the appearance of "Dark Jem" at the end, and the fact that Synergy's music seems to have infected her. Also, the cover is gorgeous.

Holly Letson says

First off, cover love. This cover is hella beautiful! Goth/Dark Jem looks amazing. I am definitely looking forward to more of this saga of Jem.

Something is off with Synergy as she is now showing Jem metal songs (more The Misfits' style than the Holograms' style), and changing her into Dark Jem. But, the others play along.

Meanwhile, The Misfits are having to choose a new lead singer, so that they will not be in breach of contract, since Pizzazz cannot sing.

Rainey says

I'm terrified.

The FountainPenDiva, Old school geek chick and lover of teddy bears says

Part One of The Dark Jem Saga.

And whoa, just from the cover alone, Jem looks like she's channeling her inner Misfit...I'm talking about the Glenn Danzig style Misfit. Looks like something is very wrong with Synergy, and it's going to spread.

And it all started with a pool party. By the way, I think Tony and Shana are tres cute as a couple. He's that sweet, cute nerd guy who obviously thinks his girlfriend being in a famous band is pretty darn cool. And Ajax is dating Stormer's brother (cool points for the 'Bella Morte' tattoo). That's got to be a wee bit weird, but hey.

Meanwhile, in The Misfits camp, the rest of the group are auditioning a gulp replacement vocalist for Pizzazz. It's not going well, and frankly, the band doesn't want it to. Unfortunately, the label wants a new record and that means fulfilling their contract.

Oh yes, I listed why I love The Misfits, but in case you missed it:

- 1) Their songs are better.
- 2) Stormer has a coffee mug that says 'Male Tears' on it.
- 3) Pizzazz named her cat Madmartigan. Uh hello, that's so boss!

Frankly, I think I'd enjoy a more gothic Jem and the Holograms.

Heather says

Issue 11 is kind of spooky! Something is wrong with Synergy and it's affecting JATH in a creepy way. The girls throw a pool party and Craig is finally revealed to be Stormer's brother. "Tony" also shows up to hang out with Shana. Jerrica becomes possessed by Synergy's glitch and introduces the virus to everyone else. This storyline is awesome.

In The Misfits' realm, Pizzazz's voice hasn't recovered from her car accident (although that whole thing didn't make the best sense) so the others audition for a hopefully temporary replacement. This storyline is about to go down the toilet.

I really liked the art in this volume, except again that 3 characters simultaneously shaved their heads (cough lazy artist cough). I got the Giant Robots Comics exclusive cover autographed by Samantha Newark (voice of Jem) from her website and it's gorgeous. The cover art looks almost exactly like the cartoon characters. The new character designs are cute but I wish they could have all looked like this!

Jem And The Holograms 11

PLOT: After a session of listening to the Starlight Girls practice, the Hologram's convince Jerrica to have a pool party. Pizzazz is still getting over her injuries from the car crash. She now has a new Siamese cat called Mad. The Misfit's feel guilty because they have to leave Pizzazz because they're called to a meeting by Haircourt. Since Pizzazz can't sing lead on the tour for the Misfit's even though they don't like it Harcourt makes them audition a new lead singer. Clash blackmails them that if they let her audition she won't tell Pizzazz, but she still doesn't make the cut. And then in walks Leah Dyer aka BLAZE. During the party, Synergy pulls Jerrica to the side and asks if she can play her something. Then something weird starts happening. Synergy's color changes, the Jem Stars turn black and all this screeching music fills the air. But Jerrica seems to be caught up in the sound (rather hypnotized by it). Aja invites Tony (Anthony) for Shana. They get to know each other. Aja realizes that Craig's sister is Stormer. Then in walks, Jerrica with half her hair dyed black, a cut-out swimsuit and black lipstick. Oooh, edgy. They follow her in and just as she's about to change we get to be continued and it looks like the Holograms are hit by the same sensation of darkness.

MY THOUGHTS: This issue gave me a lot of feeling's on looks. The biggest thing was the way it left off with me dying to see what dark Jem looked like. The anticipation I've felt ever since I completed this issue is CRAZY! Darkness and role reversal is something I often like to play with in characters and I can't wait to see where "Dark Jem, Aja, Shana, and Kimber" go not only in looks but plot-wise. I'm extremely fascinated. Speaking of looks can I just say Jetta looks STUNNING, with her pin curls and the outfit is SHARP! It's interesting also to see a more punk version of Craig than in the original series and what looks like a heavier set Anthony Julian.

RATING: 10 I think this storyline has promise! And this was a great start! So far even as an original lover of the series from back in the day this comic has met all my expectations and gone well beyond. Even though if I don't find issue 12 soon I think the wait is gonna kill me!

Heather says

I am so excited for this arc! It's going to be amazing!

This comic just keeps getting better with each issue.
