When Charla Rae Thacker and her bridesmaids show up at Andi's soap shop in Greenburg, Tennessee, for a morning of pre-wedding pampering, Andi bends over backwards to make it a pleasant experience for them all. But then Charla keels over and dies from anaphylactic shock after she uses Andi's personally blended cherries jubilee facial scrub. Andi suspects sabotage and murder when she discovers strawberries - a lethal allergen for Charla - in the scrub. Now, Andi must save her business and her reputation.

I thought it was very good even though it took me a month to read. I always had something else going on, but I never forgot what was happening. It was a very good who done it

Christian cozy

Strongly Christian cozy mystery about Andi, a store owner determined to prove that her product was not responsible for the death of her customer Chandra.

I have thoroughly enjoyed all the books that have read by Lynette Sowell. However, I did not know she had written a mystery series. My favorite genre. I was not disappointed.

Andi Clark opened her soap store in the small town where she has lived her life. Between store sales and internet sales, she has been able to stay afloat. However, the up coming spa party could change that. When things go wrong. Andi must clear her reputation. Meanwhile, her longtime boyfriend has decided to make many changes. Will she be able to embrace all of them?

The characters were very believable. All main and secondary characters were well developed. I felt like I knew the town and its many quirky secrets. The ever twisting plot kept one guessing until the end. Great ending in all aspects. This is definitely a Cozy mystery to curl up and get cozy with.

Trite and Formulaic

This reads like a Christian romance for young teens, not an adult mystery. Characters are stereotypical and 2 dimensional. Very disappointing.

I REALLY liked this book! A good mystery, good characters, and another faith-based Christian cozy series. Very well done. The protagonist has a sense that something is wrong even before the cops do, and isn't afraid to say so, even if it puts her as a target suspect - the murder happened in her store, with her product, to her less than socially tactful customer. But through it all, she has to keep in mind that God is in charge, and He will lead the way to answers to this mystery and all of the other stressors in her life, including if she should or shouldn't accept a marriage proposal from her boyfriend of several years... A really good read, and one I think many would enjoy.

This was a pretty good book kind of hard to get into at times. Andi has a shop dealing in soaps, face scrubs and the like. She is hosting a bridal facial party when the bride to be has a reaction to the face scrub and doesn't have her epine pen with her. Before anything can be done she dies. Even though it is ruled an accidental death, Andi is sure it is murder and sets out to find out who did it. It was a little too descriptive at times, which to me made it hard to follow at times.

Readable

I didn't quit reading it, but it wasn't very good. Character development was poor so I had trouble following who was who. Also had way too much religion and praying.

Maria Claudia says

Not a bad book, but totally predictable.

3.5 stars--cute cozy mystery

Leise Chadwick says

I enjoyed reading, A Suspicion of Strawberries, which was unlike other romantic mysteries in my Kindle library. The difference being it was a wholesome Christian MURDER mystery... wait, that's an oxymoron!

Let me try again... the difference is that both Andromeda and Ben, who had faith in the power of prayer, loved each other unconditionally, were faithful to each other, and they did not engage in a physical love affair. They said 'I love you' often which is so important to tell people you love.

Judy Ortiz says

I liked it, enough to recommend it to others. I liked the main character's believable thoughts and prayer life. She was somewhat impulsive but kept going back to the guiding force in her heart and mind.

Patricia says

Sometimes it is very nice to pick up a book that has no swearing and good Christian characters. This mystery unfolds in Greenburg, TN, where Andromeda Clark operates a small soap making business. I enjoyed her escapades as she attempted to help solve the mystery of a death she witnessed in her very own shop. Very often I thought she rather overdid her efforts but it still was a very fun read.
