2022? That sounds about right. Maybe by that time I'll have figured out how to become Fae. "Let it be decided by that tapestry of Fate or the Cauldron or the Mother."

Holy shit, we have to wait 4 years for this?!?

Here's what else might be happening in the next 4 FREAKING YEARS while we wait:

1. America will be going through another presidential election

2. George R.R. Martin will have finished Game of Thrones (well... he better have! *angry face*)
#dontdiegrm
- 3.. Kingdom Hearts 3?!
4. I will discover the key to happiness, figure out what I am doing with my life and be an adulting adult (kind of)

Calling it now.

Also, anyone have any thoughts on what the title may be? I'm going with A Court of Waiting and Impatience.

Update:

Found out that the last three have a separate plot and characters! *cheering* so relieved to hear this. And with all the hype around the most recent book, I suppose I'll actually have to get around to finishing ACOMAF

First thoughts:

Sooooo..... just found out this is a six book series. O.O

Am I the only one who's a little disappointed?

I mean... it started out so good, and when it turns out to be a six book thing, it almost seems like it's just become a money grab. Like oh, the first one was great, so lets just change the original plot of 2 or three books and drag it out to make as much as possible. Like no. It automatically puts a bad taste in your mouth.

Also.... still haven't finished ACOMAF. Tried for a full year. Still only like 45% through it. I'm sorry, but it put me in one of my worst reading slumps ever, I'm not sure I can forgive it for that. Not to mention that I haven't read the most recent TOG book yet. But that series I've kind of written off.

This one I had such high hopes for. But now... six books. Honestly Maas, why? Just why? Can't you write a decent series and make the plot just decent? Not with a new boy every book because you can't think up any other plot? You have fantastic writing talent, please stop wasting it.
