Goodnight Max Rosemary Wells , Ralph Hayes (Editor)

"Goodnight, Max," says Max's sister Ruby. But Max can't get comfortable. First he spills a glass of water. Then there are all those itchy cookie crumbs in his bed?and the moon shining through his window. Will poor Max ever fall asleep? Rosemary Wells's beloved Max and Ruby are back in an irresistibly touchable book that is also a satisfying bedtime story. Toddlers won't be able to resist all the tactile elements--fourteen tempting things to touch, move, even smell--while a gently humorous story makes this the perfect book for bedtime, naptime, or anytime!

We have seen this cartoon episode of Max and Ruby. Actually, it is one of my least favorite TV episodes because Ruby is doing what a parent should be for the whole story. But, in book format, that is less of a focus. This book focuses on all the things preventing Max from sleeping, and Ruby is more in the background (rather than being interrupted in her own efforts to sleep). The interactive elements are fun because they are so unique to the story, such as blankets, curtains, and sticky spots.

Jaime says

good bedtime story

Penny McGill says

Having fun with some old picture books tonight. We learned a lot from Max and his bossy sister Ruby (including a reminder of how great jello can be if you add candies or fruit to it) and we have a lot to thank Rosemary Wells for. Ms. Wells books became all time favourites in our house and we enjoy a re-read now and again.

Kaethe says

Max is mischievous, and invariably way too focused on whatever it is he shouldn't be. Ruby never learns. I love these silly bunnies.

Edna Giesen says

I chose this story because of its interactive features. These sensory features can help a child understand, focus, and come to love this book. This book can be relatable to kids who struggle to go to bed, serving as a good example to follow. Overall, the story, illustrations, and sensory interactive features makes this a great book for young children.

Denise says

Loved it... so cute and love the touchy feely parts of the book....adorable...

Dolly says

our girls love to hear this story about Max and his red rubber elephant.

Dina says

WE like to read good night books, since we read at bedtime. This one is neat, there are touchy feely pages, like sticky pajamas, a window that opens and shuts, a net for the fly swatter.

Christy says

We read this book almost every night.

Zaire Clinton says

These books never seem to make sense to me but my 2-year old loves them.
