Nathan Lewis says

Betty And Veronica were trying to save Pop Tates' shop. Betty was attempting to be a sleuth. There was another story about a mysterious father sneaking around. It seemed to be more of a drama cook them a comic book. I missed the puns.

This issue could have been perfect if not only for the cover! They could have used the cover from Francesco Francavilla that I saw included in the cover gallery. That one's a lot better than this one. I'm getting tired of seeing KJ Apa's face everywhere. XD

I love this issue, more so because of the rich history of Pop's Chock'lit Shoppe. Also, that plot twist was really cool.

Ame says

I would gladly read a Pop Tate centered series of comics about the fantastical and scary things that happen in his shop.

M (aka DarkBeauty73) says loved the back story on Pops Diner, the various stories about the place and its customers.

Rachel says

Stories that focuses all around Pops! I love the mystery, and interesting background to the beloved staple in Riverdale.

chloe ? says

This was the least enjoyable one so far. The main characters were barely in it and the story was lacklustre.

Mary Elizabeth says

An interesting, intriguing and refreshing backstory of Pop's Chock'Lit Shop, which features tales of celebrities and gangsters, previous Riverdale history, possible city corruption, and with Issue Six's mysterious ending, readers are not only left questioning their ideas about Pop's Chock'Lit Shop, but are also eager to read Issue 7.
