Well finals are nearing and we've finished this book. I can't say I loved it as a textbook. I thought they did a really poor job picking opposing arguments. Some of the authors were so out of touch that it seemed as if the publishers just went for the most extreme views they could find on each topic (GMOs, age-based health care rationing, Physician and pharmacist rights to deny treatment/rx's). I know it's supposed to be "clashing views" but I really think it's nonproductive to go with such polar opposites. I'd prefer a leftist-center vs rightist-center view points. They still clash but not so glaringly. I'll probably keep the book though. It's a good reference piece for future papers.
