Feel Again Faith Andrews

A dare.

A dying wish.

Fate...

After years of loneliness, widowed Gabriella is ready to fill the void—as long as she doesn't have to give her heart to another man.

Caleb's screwed himself right into a dead-end existence. Faced with an ultimatum, he's hell-bound on changing his reckless ways.

A chance meeting has these two instantly attracted to one another, but when their paths cross again—this time as professor and student—the roles reverse on Professor Edwards as Caleb teaches her how to feel again.

I fell in the love with this story from the very beginning. The prologue blew me away and broke my heart at the same time. From that point on, Faith Andrews slowly and carefully pieced my heart together again. Gabriella learns that love is sometimes found where you least expect it and healing past wounds is possible when you open your heart. I think it's best to walk into this story blind, so I'll leave out specifics concerning the plot line. I thoroughly enjoyed this book highly recommend it! Great read. :)

I was lucky enough to read this book prior to release and loved it. Faith Andrews just knows how to write an incredible love story! Her books make you really feel what the characters are going through and she so easily has you falling in love with their story.

This book is a second-chance love story in a way, but for main character Gabriella it is also a chance to "feel again." Widowed and still carrying heavy grief from losing her husband, Gabriella is just going through the every day motions of living. She has twin daughters to look after, but even they can't fill the emptiness she feels.

Caleb has been sort of drifting through life. He doesn't have a steady career path in mind and he never finished the college degree he started. But, an ultimatum changes all of that and also brings him into Gabriella's life.

After a chance meeting, Caleb and Gabriella have an instant attraction for each other and let me tell you it was SMOKIN' hot!

This book is definitely a must read!

I loved this book, the characters of Gabby and Caleb were thrown together by fate and together they learned to love again and be better people. They didn't let there age difference bother them and even though she was his teacher their pull to one another couldn't be denied, the strength they gave each other was good and you could see and feel how happy Caleb made Gabby. Her love for her daughters and her sister got her through one of the worst times in her life and now she wants to live again and feel again and she believes Caleb is just the person to help her get there and he feels the same about her. Thank you Faith Andrews for such a wonderful and heartfelt story and i look forward to the next book :)!!!

Faith Andrews knows how to make you fall in love again and again. I was so lucky to get an early copy of this book and let me tell you, there's another HOT man to swoon over! He is just hot and dreamy.

Caleb... you are delicious! Wait til you meet him. OMG. Total Book Boyfriend material. This book had me laughing and in tears and I loved every moment of it! And Gabriella... I had a total girl-crush on her. She's been through so much after losing her husband and soulmate. She doesn't feel she can ever love again.

Fate throws the two of them together and it's magical! I don't want to give anything away, but there are twists and turns that you won't see coming. I love Faith's writing and I couldn't put this one down. Another home run! LOVED IT!!!

Wow, where to begin ...

In a world of YA and NA books, Feel Again is a breath of fresh air. I enjoyed everything about this book from start to finish, and I PROMISE that you will have goosebumps in the first 3 pages. I refuse to give away spoilers because this is one of those books that you just have to read ... and feel ... and fall in love with, and I pinky swear, you will fall in love with it. Faith Andrews did a beautiful job at creating a story about loss, love and hope and I cannot wait for more from these characters.

An extremely emotional, hot, fun, intense second chance at love book, really really enjoyed it.

EscapeNBooks says

Faith Andrews has written one of the most beautiful love stories. Feel Again had a little of everything I love! The taboo aspect of the main characters' relationship. A strong and hot couple. And while I had an initial feeling that I would fall in love with this book, I was totally unprepared for the depths of that reality.

“Sometimes the best things in life are unexpected.”

Gabby's life has just made a sharp and unexpected change that has turned her world upside down in such a way she thinks she will never recover. In an attempt to allow the past to heal, she makes a move that will change her life in ways she cannot imagine and would only dream.

“I feel like I've been waiting forever for a chance like this.”

Caleb's arrival sets our minds buzzing with anticipation. He is THE player of all players. Just as Gabby, he is not expecting the sudden reversal in direction that his life is about to take, and is definitely not prepared for how it will expose many parts of his physical and emotional life that he had thought would never be possible.

“We’ll take it slow. I’m in no rush, baby. I’ve been waiting a lifetime for something this good.”

We become privy to the inner workings of the least likely to be paired together couple. First meetings and second meetings that leave us aching for more. As Gabby begins to allow herself to explore the feelings that Caleb evokes in her we begin to experience some of the most sensual and reviving moments. Their relationship is one that should not even be considered, but there in lies the beauty and draw. We watch as Caleb breathes life back into Gabby and she offers him something that he never knew existed, giving us one of the most beautiful contemporary romance stories.

“You make me want things I never knew I wanted.”

Faith Andrews wrote one of the most riveting introductions to a story. It picked me up out of my reading space and took me back to that day as if it was happening all over again. From the opening chapter I was held captive by the words on the page. This is a different kind of second chance love story. A second chance at love and a second chance at life. Renewal, reawakening, and experiencing a new love for the first time. Pennies from heaven made my already softened heart melt and I wasn’t even that far into the story. Caleb’s first impression of Gabby made my heart beat out of my chest. Then listening to Gabby’s own point of view...purely magical! Gina was a welcomed addition to the story, Gabby’s ray of hope and sunshine. The interactions of Gabby, her sister and her daughters wooed me. There were so many moments when I wanted to wrap Gabby in a hug and let her cry it out. She went through so much, and was such a strong picture of femininity at its best. When Aubrey showed up I knew she would be trouble. The song that came to mind for her was "Maneater". Caleb's initial inner dialogue of fun and flirtatiousness was in stark contrast to the serious and stoic dialogue of Gabby. The synchronicity of characters increased the level of intensity. I sank deeper and deeper into this new world that surrounded Gabby and Caleb. New heights and depths were reached in this story that made me continually beg for more. If there were ever two lost souls that found home and a place in one another, it was Gabby and Caleb. Go grab this book and let your heart soar.

“I’m not a spiritual man, but she just might be sent from heaven. She’s the type of woman who could change the whole game.”

Megan ~The Never Ending Book Basket says

It's no secret that I am a huge fan of Faith Andrews and her phenomenal books. I've absolutely loved each and every one of her books to pieces. There's just something about her writing, the way she creates her remarkable characters, and the emotionally driven stories she tells through her books.

I was not surprised one bit to find that I loved Feel Again immensely. I was taken in immediately with the emotional, beautiful, and spectacular story and characters within its pages.

Feel Again is hands down just a breathtaking story that tells a story of two people who know a heck of a lot about pain and loss, but are just beginning to see possibilities of light beyond all that darkness they feel. Gabriella and Caleb's story is a journey as they explore what it could be like to open themselves up to the possibility of feeling again, of embracing again, of loving again.

Gabriella was such a real character to me. The things she felt and experienced felt so authentic to me, and that realness made her character come to life as I read her heart tugging story. It also made it so easy to connect and relate to her, even though I've never experienced anything like she has. That relatability and level of connection allowed me to understand and love her character more, and it gave me the remarkable chance to step into her shoes. Faith Andrews creates such an authentic female character with Gabriella, which allows all the doubts and questions, and love and feeling she has feel extraordinarily real because of how magnificently Gabriella's character is created and developed.

I think I need a little bit more Caleb Waters in my life. His character oozed charm and a level of confidence that had my heart beating faster while simultaneously making me fall head over heels in adoration with him. There is so much more to Caleb than meets the eye, and Feel Again gives you the opportunity to see the true depth that there is to him. Getting to understand who Caleb is, will allow you the chance to see the amazingness that is him. Caleb is sweet, charmingly protective, and just a person looking for something he never knew he wanted. Caleb honestly just melted my heart throughout this entire book, and to say I loved his character is putting it too mildly.

The events of Feel Again force Caleb and Gabriella to push and fight. Both Caleb and Gabriella push each other to be more. They push each other to places they never thought they'd be or even knew they wanted to be. The level of fight that goes along with that pushing characterizes these two in the best possible way. Their story together isn't an easy one. It's filled with so many emotional and heart pulling moments, and that push and that fight from them for what they want will have you fighting like all get out right along with them in hopes that they actually get it.

Both Gabriella and Caleb have an immense amount of pain and loss in their respective pasts. Each has experienced their own darkness, and at the beginning of the story they're still kind of living in that darkness. The events of this book allow both Caleb, but especially Gabriella the chance at overcoming that pain and loss. It gives them the opportunity to experience the lightness that they both deserve. Reading how these two attempt to overcome the pain and loss they've felt for so long is nothing short of breathtaking, and it's going to pull at your heart in the best possible way.

I loved the family dynamics that come into play in Feel Again. Creating these unique, interesting, and truly engaging dynamics is one of Faith Andrews strong suits in my opinion. I loved reading these interactions and relationships that Gabriella and her family had. Each experience with these relationships made me smile, or made me feel something I've felt in my own family relationships, or made me feel even more connected into the story than I already was. The family relationships in Feel Again are fantastic, and they add just another phenomenal layer to Gabriella and Caleb's story.

There are so many little pieces to this story that add up to make bigger pieces that just make a simply beautiful picture. There are the signs that speak volumes, and the interactions between all these wonderful characters, and then there's the little nuances they all have. The glances, the feelings, the pushes and the pulls, and all the emotions in between. There are just so many little things that create big things that end up making something truly magnificent. And you will love the fact that you get to experience that. Trust me.

The level of feeling I had reading this story is one of the things I loved most about it. I didn't just read this story and I didn't just meet these characters. I felt this story, I experienced this story, and I was enveloped into this story fully. You will feel every big and little thing these characters do, and that will connect you into their story in an extraordinary way. At times my heart soared and at others it hurt like all get out, and in between there was plenty to smile at, instances that will bring a tear to your eye, and many moments that'll warm your heart and your cheeks. You're going to feel this story immensely and the enormity of what Caleb and Gabriella share together.

Feel Again is a poignant story about Caleb and Gabriella, and the chance they explore together as they attempt to overcome their pasts and see the light that they could share and feel together. Their story has its ups and its downs, and it's not without sadness, but it's also filled to the brim with so much hope and light.

I absolutely loved this book. Caleb and Gabriella's journey together just really spoke to me and I loved how connected I felt to their characters. This book, these captivating characters, and their truly emotional story will have you feeling it all again in no time. I promise you.

This is a beautiful heart warming story about second chances.

Gabriella's heart is broken after losing her soulmate, her husband. She doesn't believe she will ever love again. Then she meets Caleb. He's totally hot.

This is their story. It's an emotional and well written story. The characters are great and I totally loved the storyline. The twists and turns were unpredictable and had me gasping!! I literally had goosebumps reading this story. Loved it.

The tragedy of 9/11 affected thousands of people and lives of the ones left were to be forever changed. The prologue of this story will absolutely break your heart, even though this is a fictional story what happens in the prologue is a very real thing that happened on this sad day.

Gabriella is left widowed after her husband is killed in the 9/11 terror attacks. She is left to raise their beautiful twin daughters on her own.

“I’m not the only one who’s lost someone today, but in this moment my heart can only bear my own pain. I can’t think about anyone else when the one person who meant the world to me is no longer a part of it.”

- Gabriella

Thirteen years later and they girls are about to graduate college. Gabby moved them all to California after living in New York became to unbearable to live with. Her focus has been on her daughters, always them and their needs first. As they are about to enter the work force and move forward into the world of adulthood, they both wish that their mum could do the same, have some fun and maybe meet someone.

On a girls night out with her daughters and her sister Gina, Gabriella meets a guy at the bar. His name is Caleb and he is gorgeous. Caleb has been in a bit of a rut in his life, he has some decisions to make about his future and he is tired of doing the same thing day in, day out. He wants to meet someone special to share his life with. When he sees Gabby sitting at the bar, she completely takes his breath away.

These two meet again when Caleb walks into the summer school classroom that Gabriella is teaching English in. Neither of them have stopped thinking about each other since they met and this new development is going to test them.

“The only man who’s ever managed to make me want to forget, to feel again, will be sitting in my classroom, undressing me with those eyes. This is going to be one hell of a semester.”* – Gabriella

There is a huge attraction between these two and now it becomes even more enticing, as it is a forbidden Professor/student attraction. The pull between them becomes stronger than the fear of being caught and when they succumb to what their hearts and bodies want, it is beautiful.

“You saved me, Gabriella. Now let me save you.”* – Caleb

This is a sweet story about letting yourself feel again, when you thought you never could. Two people who find each other, heal each other and just love.

Unrealistic and Far Too Much Sex

Never thought I was a prude, but I have to caution those of you that are offended by explicit sex scenes. The premise of the book was good, a 9/11 widow finally ready to move on with her life. But the execution was badly written and did not fit the character as she had been described. There was no romance, the characters went straight to bed and seemed to stay there. The additional characters were stereotyped and just not interesting. I regret bothering to finish this book.

Advance Readers Copy (ARC) provided for my blog via blog tour for an honest review shelved it at 30% in. I can't even deal. After reading the first chapter I had to roll my eyes. I hate not finishing a book but I couldn't get into it. I loved the prologue. but after that it went down hill for me.

To me this book felt unrealistic how the characters talked was a main turn off, the main character is suppose to be in her 40's and sounds like a 14 year old.
