I'll be honest, I'm still not sure how I felt about this book.

I loved Eva, she was so kind and resourceful. She loved Patsy like a sister, even when I thought Patsy really didn't deserve it. She really went through so much in her life, most of it bad. Ranging from the loss of her parents and home, the loss of her only love, Bill, and of course (view spoiler) I liked how she never complained about her lot in life, no matter what she was doing she always looked on the brighter side of things, even as Patsy did her best to ruin everything.

I might be a harsh with Patsy, but by god does she deserve it. She was foul mouthed, reckless, could be mean and spiteful, her only redeeming quality was her love for Eva, and (view spoiler)

Bill was an okay love interest, though not in the book often and only in the same place as Eva twice it was heartwarming to see the love they had between them. As to the plot, it was simple, yet well done. There wasn't really anything new brought into the story, it was your average "woman faced hardship, woman overcomes hardship, woman meets man, all hell breaks loose" kind of story. so it was okay, but not great.
