From Reader Review Together for online ebook

Jen says

This is probably the first romance I ever bought. I can't remember now. Miller incidentally is one of the first romance authors I started with too, alongside Quick and Lindsay, etc.

Lura says

These are very choppy and not the best written stories(5). But it is good fluff to fill in time.

In All Seasons - ★★★★★

That Other Katherine - ★★???

The Scent Of Snow - ★★★??

Store-Bought Woman - to read

Karyn Bowman says

Not the easy, relaxing read I was looking for. This is a collection of five stories that read as if they are 50+ psge outlines for potential books that didn't quite make it.

Dawn says

Enjoyable stories, but not my favorite type of story from Linda Lael Miller. I like her Western Romance stories the best.

Mari says

This was a collection of 5 stories. I was surprised how different these books are from others of hers I've read. Good stories, good characters and endings.

Rebecca Lyman says

I was provided a free copy of this book in exchange for an honest and fair review. This book is a compilation of 5 short stories all by the same author. In order within the book: In All Seasons: This story is of Melissande Bradgate, the daughter of a wealthy shipping merchant, and Christian Lithwell, the second son of an Earl. These two fall in love but tragic events tear them apart. When they are brought back together it takes a lot of time to see if they can be together again. I thought this story was ok but, like the other stories in the novel, I couldn't really get into the story line and characters I couldn't see any development. The Scent of Snow: This story is about Rebecca and her two half-sisters Annabelle and Susan. Rebecca thought her friend Lucas Kiley died but when he shows up after she's told the whole town they had been married so now they have to pretend to be married. I particularly didn't care for this one, it was unrealistic and puritanical. That Other Katherine: This story is about Katherine Hollis, who realizes that she is dying in a hospital in 1991 and after begging to live wakes up in the body of Katherine Winslow in the year 1895 during the midst of childbirth. Her husband Gavin hates her and the whole town knows about her most recent affair. This story was really interesting and I thought it had a lot of potential but then the ending kind of lost me, everything was wrapped up too quickly. Store-Bought Woman: Bess Campbell travels across the country to marry John Tate, only his brother Will is the only one she finds. They basically figure out how to make it work. This one was really cheesy and made me roll my eyes a bit. I didn't particularly like it. Switch: This book weirdly enough is not listed in the description, but anyways this story is about Jamie Roberts, who switches places with her twin sister, Sara, at Sara's request. Unknown to her she's walking into a world of danger. Luckily she finds she can count on Sara's previous lover, Rowan Parrish, to help her out. The concept behind this was weird, the whole Rowan + Sara and then Rowan + Jamie thing. Other than that there were some ok points to the story but I wasn't engaged much at all.

Sascha says

When I started reading Together, an anthology of five novellas by Linda Lael Miller, I had an “ut-oh” moment because the first was a historical and I tend to stay away from most historicals. However, the writing was compelling, so I stuck with it.

Reading romance novellas requires that the reader suspends some of the expectations that they bring to novel reading. Obviously characters can't be as developed as they are in novels and there is more of a chance of insta-love. Of the five novellas, four were historicals, although one involves time travel (or something like it), and I found that I didn't really care about the insta-love. In most cases, the two already knew each other, which kind of quells ragings about insta-love.

IN ALL SEASONS

Together as two hearts once torn apart by greed and deception are united by a vow of eternal love.

Christian and Melissande had fallen in love young. Shortly before they were to marry, Melissande was told that Christian had died when his ship sank. Distraught, she tried to kill herself, but was stopped by Christian's older brother who offered to marry her instead. Rather than do so, Melissande enters a convent, where she hopes to become a nun.

Two years later a badly beaten man is found outside the gates of the convent. Melissande is overjoyed to discover that it is Christian. Her joy soon turns to heartbreak as he accuses her of betraying him and sending him to slave in the galleys of her father's ships. He wants nothing to do with her now, but must accept her assistance while he heals. Christian refuses to believe her protestations of innocence.

Over the next month, as he heals, Melissande is horrified to hear about the conditions on the ships. Now that her parents are dead, she is the owner and she is determined to make changes. Though he claims to have nothing but hatred for her now, Christian won't let her go to London alone. During the journey and after they arrive, Christian finds that he can't help being protective of her.

Melissande knows that she still loves Christian and tries to get him to accept the truth. She finds that she needs his help to accomplish her goals, just as he needs her assistance for his. I loved seeing Christian confronted by the truth when they reached his lands, and seeing him admit his fears to Melissande. I loved seeing them work together to achieve their goals. The ending was very nicely done.

THE SCENT OF SNOW

Together when true caring overcomes desperation and turns mistrust into devotion.

Very good story. Rebecca had brought her two young sisters to Cornucopia, Washington from Chicago in order to give them a better life. It isn't easy and things are tight, but they have a stable life there. Then one day Lucas Kiley comes riding up to the house, a man she never expected to see again. Lucas was just as stunned to see her. They had known each other in Chicago, where they had grown very close. When her father showed up and left her sisters with her, Rebecca had to find a way to support them all. At the same time, Lucas had been involved in an accident and was reportedly dead of his injuries. When she was given his effects she found the deed to the Cornucopia property and moved there, calling herself his wife.

Rebecca fully expects Lucas to kick her out of his home, but he doesn't. He begins to act as if they are really married. She is surprised and confused by his care and kindness, and by the way she feels when he is near. It doesn't take long for her to fall deeply in love with him. But she has a secret that has followed her from Chicago and she's afraid of what Lucas's reaction will be.

Lucas was surprised to find his home occupied when he arrived, even more so by who was there. His memories of Rebecca were one of the things that kept him going through the long days of his recovery. He discovered that he liked having Rebecca and her sisters there, and the idea of being married is growing on him. The revelation of her secret shakes his faith in her and his feelings, and he has to make a decision about what to do.

In spite of this being a short story, I really felt the progression of their romance. I loved how Lucas saw that Rebecca had never really had anyone take care of her, and how sweetly he did it. Rebecca's growing desire for Lucas was beautifully done. Her unhappiness after her big revelation had me in tears for her and waiting anxiously to see what Lucas would do. I loved the ending.

THAT OTHER KATHERINE

Together for a second chance at life and love.

The story begins with Katherine beginning to regain consciousness after being in a car accident, but it doesn't last. She pleads for her life with the "bright light" and suddenly comes to in the middle of labor in a strange place. She's quite disoriented, but within a few hours discovers that she has been transported into the body of a woman from the late 1800s. She quickly realizes that all is not well between the woman and her husband, who has accused her of infidelity.

Katherine can see that the baby is indeed Gavin's child. She knows that if she is going to be stuck in this time she is going to have to repair her relationship with her husband, but has no idea how to do it. So the first thing she does is to learn all she can about the other woman. She is also determined to be herself, which really confuses the people around her.

Gavin doesn't know what to make of the changes in his wife. He had married her for love and was hurt and furious with her actions. He decides to send her away for awhile to give him some peace. But the things he hears back from the servants confuse him and when he goes to see her there's a new spark between them. He no longer trusts her and resists those feelings for as long as he can.

I enjoyed seeing Katherine make the decision to go with the life she has been given, but also to make it her own. She isn't going to sit back and suffer the consequences of the other woman's actions. She works hard to show Gavin that she's different and that they can be happy together.

STORE-BOUGHT WOMAN

Together when misdirected desire unexpectedly leads to lasting happiness.

Bess had left Philadelphia to become a mail order bride in order to escape bad memories. She arrived only to discover that the man she was to marry had left town, leaving his brother to pick up the pieces. Will is a big man, not as polished as his brother, but very kind. He is taken by Bess right away and would really like her to stay and marry him.

Bess feels rather out of her depth with the life here so much different than her life back home. She's not too sure about Will at the beginning, but is willing to get to know him. I liked his patience with her fears and how he tried to make her feel at home. He quickly falls for her but fears that he isn't good enough for her.

Her fears overwhelm her at one point and she has to decide if her growing love for him is enough to face the risks. I liked the way it ended.

Mrs. Mounce says

This book contains five short stories that are being re-released after ten years. -IN ALL SEASONS- Set in 1508, Melissande and Christian have been reunited after several years apart. Melissande has joined a convent after believing Christian had died. Now Christian has shown up at the convent and is deathly ill. Can they work out their differences and find love once again?

-THE SCENT OF SNOW- Set in 1892, Rebecca has started a new life along with her two younger sisters, claiming a Washington homestead that is really not hers. Until one day when the real owner, Lucas shows up and realizes this woman from his past is living there. Will they be able to work things out?

-THAT OTHER KATHERINE- One Katherine lives in modern day 1991, the other (not so nice) Katherine lives in 1895. Both end up in life threatening situations, one wishing to die and the other wishing not to die. The two Katherines end up switching places and modern day Katherine wakes up to a whole new world! A world including a husband, a new baby, and a lover. How will she handle her new life?

-STORE BOUGHT WOMAN- Bess arrives in Onion Creek as the mail order bride of a man who has since decided to run off chasing gold. Now his brother, Will has come for her to take his brother's place. Will Bess be able to accept this new marriage agreement? -SWITCH- Set in modern day, this is a story of twin sisters, Sara and Jamie, who switch lives with one another at Sara's request. Unfortunately, Jamie has no idea what sort of trouble Sara is in and finds herself in a very dangerous situation. Sara's former lover, Rowan Parrish, is the only one Jamie feels can help her. Will they be able to find a way out of this danger?

This book was a fun read. Even though the stories are quick, they were detailed, and it made for an easy summer read. My favorite of the five was, The Scent of Snow.

Beth says

A very sweet book of 4 short stories. I liked it a lot. If you like light fun reads or fluff as I call them then you'll love this book.

Jody says

Book consisted of four short stories combined. All were extremely sad. It just seemed like one of the main characters was always heartbroken. But all ended happily.

Sandy Barecki says

Loved the stories .....

In All Seasons - Published 1996 - Set in 1503 - A great second chance at love story.

The Scent of Snow - Published in 1992 - Set in 1892 - A great feel good read.

That Other Katherine - Published in 1991 - A very well done time travel saga that I couldn't put down.

Taking the main character from 1991 back to 1895. Super great read.

Store-Bought Woman - Published in 1993 - Set in 1873 - Mail-order bride with a twist. Sweet.

Switch - Published in 1994 - Twins switch places. Done well with suspense.

Joan Mondragon says

I've got a book, titled "Together", that Goodreads does not have a listing for.

It contains 4 short stories by Linda Lael Miller:

In All Seasons

The Scent of Snow

That Other Katherine

Terri Hebert says

I loved every single story in this book. They were so sweet and heartfelt and it made it so hard to put down. The storylines and characters were a amazing blend that made these stories come together. Linda Lael Miller is truly an amazing author who always puts her readers first.
