Easy to read and written through the voice of experience in a very entertaining and engaging way -- as though a friend is talking to you. I too went through high school and college never learning anything about personal finance, buying a house, financing, managing credit or anything close to it. It wasn't until I got taken for a ride in the financing deal while buying a house that I realized I needed to learn and I eventually ended up taking a financing and real estate class. But this is something that should be taught in high school. Without this knowledge we are leaving young college students very vulnerable to credit card sharks. I wish this author a lot of success with his mission. This book will help anyone trying to get money and then manage it.
